Introduction

I THE TEXT

THE Old English life of St. Juliana has been preserved in a single manuscript, the Codex Exoniensis or Exeter Book, written about two centuries after the composition of the poem.

This volume formed part of a bequest made by Leofric, first Bishop of Exeter, to Exeter Cathedral. From his name, Leofric¹ seems to have been of English birth, but he was educated in Lotharingia. He became a chaplain to Edward the Confessor, and probably came to England with the king in 1042. In 1046 he was made Bishop of Crediton (comprising the sees of Devon and Cornwall); in 1050, with the consent of the king and of the Pope, he transferred his seat to Exeter, on the ground that the latter city was more secure from the attacks of pirates. He died in 1072.

On coming to Exeter, Leofric found the congregation poor, and the Cathedral despoiled of its estates and almost unprovided with books, vestments, and sacred utensils. For a time, it is said, he fed the congregation at his own expense, and he came to the aid of the Cathedral with splendid generosity.² Besides recovering many of the alienated estates, he bestowed on it much land of his own. Further, he gave the Cathedral an ivory altar, ivory croziers, silver chalices, a silver censer, bells and banners, vestments and altar-cloths, and books to the number of sixty-one, thirty-one in English, and thirty in Latin. The list of these is still extant; they consist mainly of service-books, portions of the Bible (including the Gospels in English) and theological works. Ten of these volumes are still preserved elsewhere in England; one, and one only, remains in the possession of the Cathedral. This is the work designated in the list as i mycel englisc boc be geh-wylcum pingum on leod-wisan geworht, that is, "one great English book on various subjects composed in verse," and now known as the Exeter Book.

— Since Leofric's time leaves from both the beginning and end of the book have disappeared.¹ There now remain 123 leaves, or 246 pages, numbered from 8^a to 130^b, of the original manuscript; seven other leaves have been prefixed at a comparatively modern time. In the interior of the book one leaf has been cut out between 37 and 38. The first and last pages are nearly illegible, owing to damages sustained by the manuscript at some period when it was unbound; the last twelve leaves are in varying degree marred by a hole, with charred edges, where some bit of ignited wood, or similar substance, has fallen on the open page. Otherwise the volume is in good condition.

The manuscript, which is on vellum, is neatly written, apparently in a single hand, either of the latter part of the tenth,² or the early part of the eleventh century.³

³ Schipper; Wülker, Grundriss, p. 223.

Cook thinks that it may have been prepared under Leofric's own directions.¹ After the manuscript had been written, it was corrected by a second hand, in paler ink.²

The leaves are 14 cm. in height and 18 ½ cm. in width (about 5 ½ by 7 ½ inches). A facsimile of part of page 77^a (the beginning of Gifts of Men) may be seen in Thorpe, opposite p. 293.

Among the most notable poems contained in the volume may be mentioned Christ, Guthlac, the Phoenix, Juliana, the Wanderer, the Seafarer, Widsith, the Rhyming Poem, the Soul's Address to the Body, the Ruin, and the Riddles.³

The first modern mention of the book was made by Wanley⁴ in 1705, in his Librorum Veterum Septentrionalium Catalogus, published as the second part of the The-saurus of George Hickes (Hickesius). After a brief account of the size and condition of the manuscript, he analyzed the contents, as he understood them, making a purely arbitrary division into ten books. His seventh book is as follows:—

Fol. 65b[–77b]. Liber VII. septem constans Capitibus, Tractans de Passione S. Julianæ sub Maximiano Cæsare, etc. Sic autem Incip. Hwæt we þæt hyrdon haeleð eahtian deman dædhwate. Exp. lliber. to fæder on heofnum þær us eal seo fæstnung stondeð.⁵

Nothing further is heard of the Exeter Book until the year 1812, when the Rev. J. J. Conybeare, Professor of Poetry at Oxford, submitted a paper dealing with it to the London Society of Antiquaries. This was reprinted in Archaeologia, vol. xvii (1814). In this paper, the Juliana is not discussed. Conybeare's Illustrations of Anglo-Saxon Poetry (1826), compiled from his papers, after his death, by his brother W. D. Conybeare, gives a fuller description of the manuscript,¹ with numerous excerpts and translations. Although with justice censuring Wanley's account "as scanty and inaccurate," Conybeare seems to have used it as a guide, for he echoes Wanley's wholly unjustified division into "ten books," and of several of them, including that which contains the Juliana, he gives even less information than Wanley had offered. In 1831 Robert Chambers made a copy of the whole manuscript, and in 1836 Thorpe made the copy which formed the basis of the first printed edition, his Codex Exoniensis (1842). This was the first publication of the Juliana, except for the brief passage noted below (p. x).

Thorpe's text of the Juliana served as a basis for those of Ettmüller in his Scopas and Boceras (1850) and of Grein in his Bibliothek der angelsächsischen Poesie (1858). A careful collation of the entire Exeter Book was made by Schipper in 1870-71, and published in Germania, vol. xix (1874). The text of Gollancz (1895), who is republishing the Exeter Book for the Early English Text Society, and that of Assmann (1897), in Wülker's re-edition of Grein, are based on later independent examinations of the manuscripts.

The text, as given in the original manuscript, contains numerous errors and some lacunae. The detection and emendation of these is due to the successive editors, and to the other scholars who have discussed the Juliana; see the appended bibliography, and the list of variants.

The runic passage of the Juliana was translated by Kemble in 1840 (see p. x). A modern version of the entire poem was given by Thorpe, and again by Gollancz. A German translation was published by Grein (1859) in his Dichtungen der Angelsachsen ii. 47-66.

II THE AUTHOR

Wanley,¹ the first describer of the Exeter Manuscript, remarked the occurrence of runic letters in the "Poem on the Day of Judgment" (Christ 779-866), and Hickes, in his Thesaurus, which Wanley's Catalogue accompanied, had given a facsimile of the passage involved.² But neither Wanley, nor Hickes, nor their readers, detected the hidden purpose of the mysterious characters. Conybeare, in his Illustrations,³ again mentioned these runic letters, and referred to Hickes's facsimile. Each letter, Conybeare explained, denoted an entire word, either its name or some word of similar sound. He, also, had missed the cipher.

It was reserved for Kemble to discover the signature concealed in the "Poem on the Day of Judgment," and also those in Juliana and the Elene. His discovery was announced to the Society of Antiquaries of London in a paper entitled On Anglo-Saxon Runes, published in 1840,⁴ but apparently presented in 1839.⁵ Kemble says: ⁶ "In the Vercelli MS. is contained a poem on the finding of the Cross by the Empress Helena ; after the close of the poem, and apparently intended as a tail-piece to the whole book, comes a poetical passage consisting of one hundred and sixty lines, in which the author principally refers to himself, and after a reference to his own increasing age and the change from the strength and joyousness of youth, he breaks out into a moralizing strain, in which he concludes his work." After quoting El. 1256b-1270a,¹ Kemble continues: "The extreme rudeness and abruptness of the lines, and the apparent uselessness of the Runes, led me to suspect that there was more in them than merely met the eye. And this I found to be the case ; for on taking the Runes out of the context, using them as single letters and writing them in one word, they supplied me with the name CYNEWULF, undoubtedly no other than the author of the poems. It was now with the utmost interest that I read the following passage from the still more celebrated Codex Exoniensis, fol. 19, b." At this point, Kemble quotes Christ 795-808a, with a translation. He continues: "Here we have the same Runes, and that in a passage which bears a remarkable similarity in the thoughts and images to the one last cited ; only the Rune ᛗ. i. e. E, is wanting, from which we may conclude that at least one couplet² is lost. . . .

"Not content with having once already given us this acrostic of his name, the poet repeats it at a later period in the Exeter Book, and in a manner which renders it very difficult to translate the lines, so great is their obscurity." With this introduction Kemble quotes and translates Juliana 697-712a, remarking at the end, "It is evident here that the poet literally means to use the letters that make up his name, and that he does not introduce them as words, which he had done in the passages previously quoted."

At very nearly the same time, Cynewulf's authorship of the Elene was announced by the great German scholar Jacob Grimm.¹ Early in 1839 Grimm had with some difficulty obtained a copy of Thorpe's Appendix B to Mr. Cooper's Report (1835), containing the poems of the Vercelli MS. From this he took the text of the Andreas and Elene for his edition (1840; the preface is dated Oct. 19, 1839). To the Exeter MS. Grimm did not have access; consequently he could not know of the runic passages in Christ and Juliana.

A fourth passage of the same kind, occupying leaf 54a of the Vercelli MS., had by reason of its illegibility been silently omitted by Blume, the first transcriber, and remained undiscovered until 1888, when it was published by Napier.² This passage follows the Fates of the Apostles, and has by some been regarded as the conclusion of that poem; it has also, by others, notably Trautmann³ and Skeat,⁴ been considered as forming, with the Fates of the Apostles, an epilogue to the Andreas. For the present, without entering into the question of its relation to these other poems, we may speak of it as the Fragment.

As early as 1840, then, it was known that there had existed an English poet who was undoubtedly the author of the Juliana, the Elene, and what was then called the Poem on the Day of Judgment. In one of these poems, the Elene, occurred a passage (lines 1236-1276) professedly autobiographic. In this passage⁵ the poet spoke of himself as one who in early life had been in and of the world, and had been rewarded with treasure in the hall, but who had acquired the consciousness of sin, had found comfort in the divine grace, and now, an old man, rejoiced in exercising a Heaven-sent gift of song. Little more than this could be gathered from the sombre and obscure allusions to his history made by the poet himself. The question naturally presented itself : was it possible to obtain any further information regarding him ? Could he be plausibly identified with any previously known bearer of the name of Cynewulf ; could any other of the Old English poems be recognized as his work ; was it possible, by studying the language of the writings unquestionably his, to determine with any precision the time and place in which he lived ?

To these queries, in the course of the more than sixty years that have elapsed since Kemble and Grimm discovered the poet's signature, many widely differing answers have been offered.¹ Some of the early conjectures, however, made at a time when the phonology of the Old English dialects had not yet been scientifically examined, and before the researches of Sievers (1885) had determined the laws of Old English versification, present now only an interest of curiosity. Such, for instance, is the conjecture of Kemble (Archaeologia, p. 363) that the poet was the same as Cenwulf or Kenulf, Abbot of Peterborough and Bishop of Winchester, who died in 1006, and the argument of Leo (1857),² that the poem known as the first Riddle is a charade, written by Cynewulf, which has for its answer the poet's name. Both these suppositions are inadmissible. With regard to the first it may be pointed out that Cynewulf and Cenwulf are entirely distinct names; that although each is found with several forms and spellings, the first always has the vowel y, the second always oe or e; further, that the second cannot possibly have a connecting vowel.¹ Besides, if Cenwulf had written poetry, he would have written it in late West-Saxon, similar to that of the writings of Aelfric and of contemporary entries in the Chronicle. No West-Saxon at the beginning of the eleventh century would have made, for instance, two syllables of sīe (= sī-e), as Cynewulf twice does (El. 675, Jul. 280), nor would he have written e for æ in such words as ðēgon or æwēge (Jul. 687, 487), or for īe in nēd (Jul. 464). As to the supposition that Cynewulf's name was concealed in the so-called first Riddle, not only did this involve (by a process too intricate to be explained here) the same impossible equivalence of the prefixes Cyne- and Cen-, but in 1888 Mr. Henry Bradley² made it certain that the "riddle" is no riddle at all, but an epic fragment, like The Wife's Complaint. Leo's conjecture, based on suppositions now easily seen to be fantastic, led by successive steps to a series of erroneous conclusions regarding the poet, notably that he had been a wandering minstrel and that he was the author of all the riddles of the Exeter Book. These misconceptions, though challenged as early as 1869, were for a long time almost universally accepted, and have contaminated nearly every account of Cynewulf and his writings previous to Trautmann's monograph of 1898.

to us, we must take into consideration the linguistic peculiarities of his signed poems, the linguistic evidence afforded by the way he spells his name, and the testimony regarding his life which he furnishes in the Elene. Then we must see whether the data thus obtained are sufficient to establish his identity with any of the recorded Cynewulfs.

Now Cynewulf's poems are preserved in manuscripts (the Exeter and Vercelli Books), both written somewhere about the year 1000 by scribes who not only made occasional blunders,¹ but also, by a process of incomplete normalizing, wrote words partly in their West-Saxon forms, and partly in non-Wessex forms, the latter undoubtedly representing the original version.² It is, of course, more difficult to derive conclusions from such late and contaminated texts, than it would have been if the poems were preserved in contemporary manuscripts, written throughout in the author's own dialect; still, as already indicated, it is perfectly plain that the author was not a West-Saxon. Further, it is shown on closer examination³ that he was almost certainly a Northumbrian, as was first proposed by Leo, and subsequently, on more scientific grounds, urged by Sievers⁴ and Trautmann.⁵ Cook⁶ thinks that we must concede the possibility of his having been an Anglian, and not necessarily a Northumbrian in the narrower sense.

The best indication of Cynewulf's period is afforded, as Sievers has pointed out,⁷ by the way in which he spells his name. From the nature of the case, this significant word has been preserved as the poet wrote it, each letter being represented by an entire word, and the whole being embedded in four distinct records which must be practically intact, as they still make sense and metre. Apart from the interchange of K and C, the prefix that occurs in the name is found in three successive forms : Cyni-, Cyne-, and Cyn-. The change of unstressed i to e took place about the middle of the eighth century, before that period only Cyni- being found, as in the Historia Ecclesiastica of Bede (d. 735), who writes Cyniberct, Cynigils, Cynimund, etc. After 740 or 750, Cyni- is still occasionally written, but Cyne- becomes the established form. Finally, Cyn- (the e being lost before h, e, r, w, and finally before s) does not show itself until the end of the eighth or the beginning of the ninth century, at which time all three forms are found, the two earlier persisting as traditional usages. Now in Juliana and in Elene the poet signs himself Cynewulf; these poems were consequently not written before 750. In Christ and in the Fragment he writes Cynwulf;¹ these poems are consequently of later date than the former two, and fall toward the close of the century.

Cynewulf is thus a Northumbrian, or at least an Anglian, whose maturity lies in the second half of the eighth century. The mere fact of his authorship points to his being a monk or ecclesiastic; when we reflect further that the Juliana, Elene, and Christ are all on religious themes, and are based, the two former wholly, the latter in part, on Latin originals, this conviction becomes a certainty. What he further tells of himself has already been indicated¹; but on account of the great interest attaching to the passage, we here translate it entire.²

“Thus, experienced and ready to depart, by reason of the treacherous body, I have woven word-craft and curiously gathered, time and again pondered, and sifted my thought, in the confinement of night. I knew not rightly of the cross before wisdom, through the noble Might, disclosed a broader view, to the thought of my heart. I was defiled by my deeds, fettered by sins, tormented by sorrows, bitterly bound, oppressed with cares, until the Mighty King through the bright estate bestowed wisdom for the solace of the old man, granted a glorious gift, and infused it into my mind, revealed instruction, in the course of time increased it, unbound my body, set free my heart, [and] unlocked the power of song which I have practiced with pleasure, with joy in the world. Of the tree of glory I had remembrance, not once only, but often, ere I had disclosed the miracle of the bright tree, accordingly as in the course of events I found related in writings concerning the token of victory. Always until that [time] was the man beaten by waves of sorrow, the WARRIOR distressed, though in the meadhall he received gifts, embossed gold. PASSION sorrowed; WRATH, its companion, suffered sore pain, an oppressive secret, though for him the STEED went, measured the milepaths, and proudly ran, adorned with wires. JOY has waned, pleasure [has waned] with years, youth has been transformed, the former pride. POSSESSION was of old the splendor of youth; now are the days of yore passed away after the allotted time, the joys of life departed, as WATER flows away, the driven floods. WEALTH is for each one transitory beneath the sky; the ornaments of the earth pass away, likest to the wind when it rises loud before men, wanders among the clouds, advances raging, and suddenly becomes still again, close confined in its prison, constrained by force.”¹

The “Might” of which the poet speaks is the divine power; the “bright estate” is the priesthood, or, perhaps, some angelic vision; the “tree of glory” is the true cross, whose recovery forms the subject of the Elene. Cynewulf seems to say that in his youth he had lived a worldly life, had been a horseman and a warrior, and had been rewarded with treasure for deeds of prowess; but that later he had ceased to find pleasure in worldly joys, had become a priest, and had with devout care composed religious poetry. It is not necessary to accept the literal implication of all that he says, and to imagine him as old, poor, and decrepit. In mediæval times, men sometimes spoke of themselves as old at forty or less,² and to the religious soul all human strength and wealth were naught.

Can we now recognize our Cynewulf in any Cynewulf of the records? The name was not uncommon; one manuscript of the Chronicle mentions three different holders of it within a space of six years.³ Other Cynewulfs are found as signatories to documents and in the lists of the Liber Vitæ of Durham.⁴

Two Cynewulfs have been put forward as claimants for the authorship of the poems; one, the Bishop of Lindisfarne who died 781-783 ; the other, a priest, probably of Dunwich, who signed a decree executed at Clovesho in 803. The first was proposed by Dietrich, and accepted by Grein ; his claims have recently been strongly urged by Trautmann. The second is suggested by Cook.

Of Cynewulf the Bishop, the Chronicle records that he was enthroned in 737 (MSS. D, E), that he retired in 779 and that he died in 782 (MSS. D, E, F). Simeon of Durham (d. about 1130) gives some further information.¹ According to Simeon, Cynewulf met with continual difficulties in the discharge of his holy office. Offa, a relative of the royal house, who had taken sanctuary at the shrine of Cuthbert, had been forcibly dragged away and then murdered, whereupon King Eadberht had the bishop seized (A. D. 750) and imprisoned at Bamborough. Cynewulf's duties were meanwhile performed by Frithuberht, Bishop of Hexham. Subsequently the king relented, and Cynewulf was released and restored to his episcopate. In 780, broken down by age and infirmity, he withdrew from his office, which he consigned to Hildebald. After three years of repose and prayer, he died in 783 and was succeeded by Higebald.

Against the identity of bishop and poet, three arguments are adduced. First, the argument of silence ; the bishop is nowhere mentioned as a writer. Second, the argument that the circumstances of his life were not such as to have permitted poetical composition, until those last years when it would have been too late to begin practising an unfamiliar art. Third, the resemblance of Elene 1276-1320 to a passage in Alcuin's treatise on the Trinity iii. 21, which must have been written after 800, being dedicated to Charlemagne as Emperor.²

If the burden of proof rests with the negative, these arguments are not conclusive. To the first, one may reply : If the early authorities know nothing about writings of Cynewulf the Bishop, neither do they know of the writings of Cynewulf the poet. The latter certainly exist ; consequently the absence of any mention of writings of Cynewulf the Bishop is not a fatal objection. The second argument is no more convincing than the plea that Shakespeare could not have written his own plays. If Boethius, Cervantes, Bunyan, and William Penn could write in prison, why not Cynewulf? As to the third argument, Cook concedes that "the thought of Alcuin is not dissimilar to that of Cæsarius of Arles, in a sermon printed among Augustine's works."¹ And C. F. Brown has since shown that almost the entire passage in Alcuin is transcribed verbatim from a writer of the seventh century (St. Eligius, Bishop of Noyon), and that all the views expressed in it can be traced back to the early Fathers.²

But though it cannot be proved that the Bishop was not the poet, it remains only possible, and not demonstrable, that he was. In the absence of any direct testimony that the Bishop wrote English poems and of any definite statement by the poet of his rank and office, we are not justified in regarding the identity of the two bearers of so common a name as an historical fact.

The claims of the other Cynewulf mentioned, the priest of 803, are still less substantial. He bears the magic name, it is true ; he is a priest ; we cannot reject him on the grounds of time and place ; he may even have been a travelled Northumbrian, if conjecture is to be unconfined. But this is not proof.

We must then reluctantly admit that no sufficient evidence exists to identify the author of the poems with any Cynewulf known to us from other sources.

The question, how much of the old English poetry is to be ascribed to Cynewulf, has been debated ever since the discovery of the runes. The mental satisfaction of being able to name an author for a given literary work has tempted many scholars to credit him with pieces on very slender evidence. Kemble and Thorpe thought it possible that Cynewulf had written everything in the Exeter and Vercelli MSS. ; their immediate successors, though not quite so generous as this, went to great lengths in ascribing to Cynewulf poems which in tone and general phraseology resembled the signed works. Dietrich's combination into one poem, the Christ, of what had been printed by Thorpe as fifteen separate pieces, and Leo's supposed solution of the first Riddle, were important in this connection. To Wülker¹ belongs the credit of having called a halt to the process of recklessly assuming Cynewulfian authorship of anonymous pieces on insufficient grounds. The dialectal and metrical researches of Sievers,² and Napier's discovery of the Vercelli Fragment, afforded new starting points for a discussion which seems to be never-ending.

The Juliana, in itself, is not complicated with any dispute as to authorship. No extraneous lines have ever been conjectured to form a part of it ; no passage in it has ever been denounced as an interpolation ; the author's name is signed in full.

Everywhere else, however, we meet with some disputed point. It would be trespassing on the province of the other volumes in this series, if the present editor did more than indicate what these disputed points are, waiving any thorough discussion.

Trautmann stoutly refuses to admit the unity of the Christ. For him only the second part (lines 440-866) is Cynewulf's work; the rest is to be rejected. His confidence in this view has reached the point of contempt for any contrary opinion. Cremer,¹ however, regards the lines from 779 to the end as the only part written by Cynewulf.

Dietrich² saw in the Dream of the Rood a prelude or introduction (by Cynewulf, of course) to the Elene. The Fragment, in which Sievers,³ with great probability, sees only a detached passage from some unknown or lost poem, has been regarded by several scholars⁴ as an epilogue to the Fates of the Apostles, thus fixing the latter upon Cynewulf, while some others⁵ have confidently combined Fragment, Fates and Andreas into one heterogeneous non-descript, and made Cynewulf responsible for the whole. One involuntarily recalls the guessing of the first Riddle, and the detection of the poet in Cenwulf of Peterborough.

On Leo's solution of the first Riddle and two further forced solutions of his own,⁶ Dietrich⁷ based the assumption that the Riddles were all by Cynewulf. All the suppositions that favoured this view have been discredited, however, and the Riddles are now generally recognized as non-Cynewulfian. Riddle xxxvi exists in a Leyden MS. that writes i in unstressed syllables (ni, giðraec, heliðum), and must be earlier than the period in which Cynewulf spelled his name with an e. Of course, there are still other reasons for dating the Riddles before Cynewulf's time, but one will suffice here.

The three other pieces for which Cynewulfian authorship has been most frequently urged are the Andreas (on grounds other than its supposed connection with the Fragment), Guthlac (especially "Guthlac B," the apparently distinct poem which begins at line 791), and the Phoenix. The arguments for Cynewulf are the similarity in subject and general treatment to his acknowledged works, the frequent coincidences of expression,¹ and the linguistic and metrical resemblances. To meet these are presented the absence of the runic signature, and the metrical necessity of admitting quantities and inflectional forms (as glǣdum, glādum, Phoen. 92, 303; fōtas, Phoen. 311; fēondas, Guth. 189, 392), not found in the acknowledged poems. Further, it must be admitted that the resemblances of word, phrase and idea extend in varying degree through practically the whole body of Old English religious poetry, and have common sources in the phraseology of the heroic poems, and in that Latin religious literature which was the common property of Christendom.

Guthlac B stands the tests well, and may very possibly be by Cynewulf. The Andreas and the Phoenix, while displaying resemblances probably amounting to imitation, must remain anonymous. If this is in some ways a disappointment, in that it deprives Cynewulf of honour that we might wish to have been his, it has the compensation of adding to the number of the early masters of English verse.

Cynewulf come the Harrowing of Hell and the Physiologus (Panther, Whale, Partridge). But even the Beowulf has not escaped.¹

It will thus be seen that the list of Cynewulf's writings has been much disputed. Where so much is debatable, it is best to be cautious in laying down conclusions, but the student will not go far wrong if he regards the Juliana, Elene, Christ, and Fragment as the authentic works, with a strong probability that Guthlac B is by the same hand. He may bear in mind, however, that the unity of the Christ has been contested by high authority.

III THE LEGEND

Cynewulf derived the material for his poem from a history of Juliana's life in Latin prose, one of the hundreds, indeed thousands, of lives of saints which in his day were current throughout Christendom, and which in similar abundance may still be read in the great folio volumes of the Bollandist Acta Sanctorum. It is interesting to note that of the numerous mediæval accounts of this saint, both in verse and in prose, Cynewulf's is the oldest in any vernacular language.

According to the legend, St. Juliana was put to death at Nicomedia in the reign of Galerius Maximianus. The place, Nicomedia, and the time, the reign of Maximian, equivalent to 305-311, are constant in all the versions of the legend. That at such a time and place a young girl named Juliana suffered martyrdom may be an authentic tradition; the rest of her story is for the most part obviously fabulous, the product of pious invention in ages when everything that was marvellous found ready acceptance.

The earliest extant notices of St. Juliana occur in the Martyrologium Vetustissimum, ascribed to St. Jerome (d. 420), which has, under date of February 16,

Nicomediæ, passio sanctæ Julianæ virginis et martyris,¹ and in the Liber Comitis, a similar compilation, also ascribed to St. Jerome, in which we find,

xiv. Kal. Martii. Natale sanctorum Onesimi et Julianæ virginis.²

The Martyrologium Romanum Vetustius seu Parvum, found at Ravenna by Archbishop Ado about 850, and supposed to have been written toward the end of the seventh century, gives, under February 16,

Et in Cumis,³ S. Julianæ virginis.⁴

Juliana's name appears with that of other saints in a litany of the English Church of the end of the seventh century,⁵

S. Juliana. Ora,

but is lacking in many litanies of later date which Migne publishes.⁶

But the notice of St. Juliana given in the martyrology of Bede (d. 735) is of a different character. Instead of the mere date, place and name, we find a much longer entry, concise it is true, but with circumstantial detail. Bede writes,

³ A mistake frequent in the later martyrologies. Her body is related to have been removed, first, from Nicomedia to Pozzuoli (Acta § 21), then, in the latter half of the sixth century, to Cumæ (Alia Vita § 24), and next, in 1207, to Naples (Translatio III. S. Julianæ § 8). The works cited are all printed in Acta Sanctorum, Feb. tom. II. The subsequent history of her remains is involved in contradictions and uncertainties; details in the prefatory remarks in the same volume.

Et in Cumis natale sanctæ Julianæ virginis, quæ tempore Maximiani imperatoris primo a suo patre Africano cæsa et graviter cruciata, deinde et a præfecto Eleusio, quem sponsum habuerat, nuda virgis cæsa et a capillis suspensa est et plumbo soluto capite perfusa et rursus in carcerem recepta, ubi palam cum diabolo confligit, et rursus evocata, rotarum tormenta, flammæ ignium, ollam ferventem superavit, ac decollatione capitis martyrium consummavit. Quæ passa est quidam in Nicomedia, sed post paucum tempus, Deo disponente, in Campaniam translata.¹

It is plain that Bede, or some unknown epitomizer by whose labours he profited, had access to a detailed account of Juliana's martyrdom. More than this, his source can easily be identified. In every feature, his summary agrees with the Acta St. Julianæ published by Bolland in the Acta Sanctorum under date of February 16.² And further, in spite of minor discrepancies and of changes made by the poet for his own purposes, a comparison, easily made, between Cynewulf's Juliana and the Acta shows that the latter work, in a version not greatly differing from those which are still preserved, was the source of the Old English poem as well. The Acta St. Julianæ, then, as the source of Cynewulf's poem, becomes the subject of our investigation. What can be ascertained regarding the history of this work before it came into the hands of Bede and subsequently of Cynewulf? What, if anything, can be said with certainty, and what with reasonable probability, regarding its place and date of composition, and the source of the information which it professes to give?

Bolland¹ used eleven manuscripts in preparing his printed text, and knew of the existence of others.² He does not, however, tell more of their date than that they are "old." In his notes he gives at least the principal variants of his MSS. Schönbach³ is more explicit regarding three MSS. which he mentions: of two at Munich, one is of the twelfth century and the other a little older; one at Vienna is as early as the ninth century. Unquestionably other MSS. still exist in European libraries, and among them may perhaps some day be found one which will substantially represent Cynewulf's original.

Lives of martyrs, with accounts of their sufferings, were composed in the earliest days of the Church, and transmitted from one Christian community to another. But these oldest Acts perished, for the most part, in the systematic destruction of Christian books that accompanied the Diocletian persecution. After the victory of Christianity under Constantine, however, an effort was made to restore the lost works, and to collect the names of all the martyrs of the Church.⁴ From this time on, there was free opportunity for the development of this branch of religious literature, and in the course of the following centuries, when almost every church in Europe had come to be the possessor of some holy tomb or precious relics, about which miracles were wrought, an enormous mass of tradition and legend arose, which was embodied in written form in the lives of countless saints, martyrs, and confessors.

In the seventh century, this literature had become so abundant as to excite, on the one hand, the zeal of enthusiasts, who aimed to secure for their own monasteries or churches complete sets of the various Lives, and on the other hand, the distrust of the authorities, who could not be unaware that much in these biographies was pure fable, and who found also that through the inadvertence or ignorance of their authors, the Lives occasionally seemed to give support to unsound doctrine.

“Baillet tells us in the Discours sur l’histoire de la vie des saints prefixed to his Les vies des saints (4 vols., folio, Paris, 1701), that the Council of Constantinople in 692 condemned to the fire all the false histories of martyrs and anathematized all who received them or gave them credence. He informs us further that St. Ceran (Ceraninus) of Paris, who lived in the beginning of the seventh century under Lothair II., undertook to collect the Acts of the martyrs, and spared no pains to have copies made of those that were in the different churches of France. So, also, St. Prix (Præjectus) of Clermont in Auvergne, who lived fifty years after Ceran, not only collected the ancient Acts, but composed new ones. St. Aldhelm, too, of Sherborne, England, who died in 709, made extracts from the Acts of some of the martyrs for his works on the praise of virginity. Unfortunately he does not mention St. Juliana. We see, however, by the use that Aldhelm made of them, as Baillet says, that the false or falsified Acts of saints of the most distant provinces of Asia were already current in the West in his time and had even reached England. He remarks further that almost all the histories turned into fables in the hands of those who treated them ; the most conscientious thought themselves compelled to consecrate even falsehood to truth, and to use pious impositions to the greater glory of God. The Acts of Saints were brought into the Missals and Breviaries, and read just as the Epistle and the Gospel in the churches of the West.”¹

Acts of saints and martyrs were thus abundant in western Europe early in the seventh century. Can we set the Acta S. Julianæ still farther back ? Inasmuch as the Acta does not mention the translation to Cumæ, which is said to have taken place some time between 568 and 600,² Bolland concludes that it must have been written before this period. This will hardly be questioned ; unfortunately, however, there is no further evidence, such as citation by earlier writers, or indications in the text itself, to date the Acta more definitely. One cannot tell with certainty whether it is a work of the fourth, fifth, or sixth century.

Many of the early Acts of Martyrs were originally composed in Greek. Does this hold true of the Acts of St. Juliana ? While no such Greek original is now known to exist, it is probable, on general grounds, that the Acta is a translation from the Greek. Juliana is an Eastern saint ; it is most likely that her life should first be written in the language of her own country. Further, by reference to the Acta and variants, as printed in the Appendix to this edition, it will be seen that the variants denoted by M (from a MS. or MSS. cited by Schönbach, as there explained) agree so closely in substance with the text used by Bolland, and yet differ from it so noticeably in wording, as to suggest at once the inference that they represent two independent translations from the same original. And the original could only be Greek.

The removal of the saint's body to Pozzuoli, and the establishment of her shrine in that place, made it natural that the record of her martyrdom should be translated into the language of western Christendom. It was probably some Italian clerk or priest, some Campanian, near enough to her resting-place at Pozzuoli to feel the inspiration of her presence, perhaps even connected with the church or monastery that possessed her relics, who turned her story into Latin and thus made possible its further dissemination.

The sources upon which the original author drew in composing the life of his heroine were various. His starting-point may well have been some authentic tradition; the name of the saint, the place and time of her martyrdom. Some circumstance connected with her life or death may have accompanied these. To this might be added traditions properly attaching to other persons of the same name, for there are several Julianas in sacred legend. Then would come further incidents, miracles like those of the Old and New Testaments and of the Apocryphal Gospels and Acts, transferred from their original performers or beneficiaries to the new heroine. Thus Juliana's miraculous preservation in the molten lead (Acta § 18; Juliana 577-594) seems to duplicate the apostle John's miraculous immunity when immersed in boiling oil.¹ Other miracles may have been borrowed from already current lives of saints, lest the writer's own patroness should seem to be surpassed. Thus St. Lucia

(Sept. 16) had remained unharmed in a brazen pot in which lead and pitch were melted¹; St. Catherine (Nov. 25) had been tortured with the wheel² as ruthlessly as Juliana (Acta § 14; the OE. poem has a lacuna here). Finally, to complete and round out the story, pious invention came into free play, and new miracles, the creation of the unaided imagination, were joined to the others, and lavish dialogue was supplied, providing the devout reader with the menaces of the tyrant, the responses, the prayers, and sometimes the theologic dialectics of the sufferer, the infernal solicitations of the fiend, and even the comments of the bystanders. Such a literary process would produce the Acta St. Julianæ as we have it, and as, in the eighth century, it lay before Cynewulf.³

It is not remarkable that lives of saints composed in this fashion should bear a strong family resemblance. As a matter of fact, the circumstances and miracles of the Acta St. Julianæ appear again and again, with only slight modifications, in the lives of the other woman saints of the early Church. St. Juliana is only one of a throng of virgin martyrs with similar history. The typical virgin martyr is a girl of noble rank (St. Juliana, St. Agatha, St. Anastasia, St. Catherine, St. Basilla, St. Cyrilla), devout and learned (St. Juliana, St. Susanna), sought in marriage by some heathen proconsul or prefect or prefect's son (St. Agatha, St. Juliana, St. Agnes). She rejects her suitor, and refuses to sacrifice to Apollo (St. Anastasia, St. Euphemia, St. Juliana). Brought before the prefect for trial, she adheres to her faith, whereupon she is submitted to atrocious torture and humiliation. She is stripped naked (St. Agnes, St. Barbara, St. Juliana), scourged and cudgelled (St. Agatha, St. Anastasia, St. Dorothea, St. Euphemia, St. Lucia); hung up by the hair (St. Juliana, St. Symphorosa); torn by a wheel in which are set swords or sharp hooks (St. Juliana, St. Catherine, St. Euphemia, St. Christina); placed in a hot cauldron (St. Juliana, St. Lucia, St. Fausta), and in the flames (St. Agnes, St. Juliana, St. Euphemia, St. Macra, St. Cecilia). Instead of harming her, the fire bursts out and consumes the miscreant bystanders (St. Agnes, St. Juliana, St. Christina). Her executioners become converted by her constancy, and meet death for their faith (St. Juliana, St. Anastasia, St. Fausta). After another imprisonment (St. Juliana, St. Lucia, St. Anastasia), she is beheaded (St. Agnes, St. Juliana, St. Dorothea, etc.; almost all perish in this way),¹ and is thenceforward enrolled in the great army of the Church Triumphant, while her memory is tenderly and reverently cherished by the devout in this world.

IV THE POEM

In Northumbria, then, some time in the second half of the eighth century, a period marked in that kingdom by declining power and factional strife, Cynewulf, a monk or priest, perhaps the Bishop of Lindisfarne of that name, became acquainted with the Acta St. Julianæ, in a form not greatly unlike that printed in this volume, and decided to make this saint the subject of an English poem, perhaps his first work of such an ambitious character. Whether any special circumstance prompted him to select Juliana rather than some other equally well-known virgin martyr — Margaret, Catherine or Dorothea — is beyond conjecture. His purpose in undertaking this work was to perform an act of piety and of religious edification: to embody in language which all might understand, the story of a heroine of the Christian faith, and to embrace the opportunities thus presented of dwelling upon matters of conduct and of doctrine. Such was his primary aim; his artistic ideal was to compose this work in the traditional form and diction of Old English poetry, the form and diction of the heroic and the religious poems, such as Beowulf and the epic of Cædmon, with which there is every ground for supposing him to have been acquainted. His artistic ideal comprised also the aim to free the story from certain blemishes present in the Latin original, to separate, as it were, the finer metal from the dross, and thus to convert the principal figure of the legend into one of wholly admirable saintliness.

One of the familiar characteristics of the Old English religious poetry is the continual application to sacred and to saintly personages of the old warlike epithets derived from the heroic poetry of ultimately pre-Christian origin. Thus the Andreas begins,

Hwæt, wē gefrūnan on fyrndagum twelfe under tunglum tīrēadige hæleð, þēodnes þegnas; nō hira þrym ālæg
4 camprædenne, þonne cumbol hnēotan,

þæt wāron mære men ofer eorðan,
frome folctogan ond fyrdhwate, rōfe rincas, þonne rond ond hand
10 on herefelda helm ealgodon.

“Lo, we have heard of twelve glorious heroes beneath the stars in days of old, thanes of the Prince; their glory failed not in combat when ensigns clashed. . . . These were illustrious men upon earth, mighty leaders of the host and warlike, fierce warriors when shield and hand guarded the helm on the battlefield.”

These fierce warriors are the twelve apostles; the Prince is God. The metaphor of the Church Militant is carried out in detail. Inasmuch as Juliana is a woman, the poem dealing with her cannot be written wholly in this strain. But the old Teutonic spirit asserts itself nevertheless. God is spoken of as æðelinga Wyn, beorna Hlêo, heofona Helm: “Delight of warriors, Protection of heroes, Helm of the heavens” (ll. 730, 272, 122); Peter and Paul are called Crîstes begnas, “thanes of Christ” (299); Eleusius, the Roman prefect, is called rice gerêfa, æðeling, hildepremma, pēoden: “the mighty reeve, the atheling, the famous in war, the prince” (19, 37, 64, 83). When he summons Juliana’s father before him, the two set down their spears together (63). And when, after the death of Juliana, Eleusius goes to sea, and is drowned with his men, the expressions used are characteristically Old English; the sea is called the “swan-road” (675), and of his men it is said that nevermore should they hope to sit in the hall upon the ale-benches and receive gifts of rings and embossed gold (683–688).

The Juliana of the Acta is not wholly a sympathetic figure. To begin with, she is deceitful. After leading Eleusius to believe that she will marry him on condition of his becoming prefect, thus inducing him to go to the expense of obtaining that office, she makes a new condition and demands that he change his religion if he would marry her (§1). She is vindictive. She prays that her persecutor Eleusius may die in agony : et fac ipsum præfectum, participem demoniorum, a me derideri, et ipsum consumptum a vermibus magno dolore torqueri (§5) ; she beats the miserable Belial with a chain until he shrieks (§10). She is coarse of speech (§3). All this Cynewulf omits, and instead of representing her as ready, upon condition, to accept her suitor, he ascribes to her what the Church commended as the noblest of resolves, the vow of perpetual virginity (28-31). Yet, by a strange inconsistency, he later returns to his original, and makes her ready to marry Eleusius if he will become a Christian (46-50 ; 108-116).

It is significant also that Cynewulf suppresses the names of devils and of false gods that occur in the Latin : Mars, Apollo, Diana, Satan, Beelzebub, Belial (§§ 2, 4, 7, 8). It has been suggested¹ that his object was to avoid putting a possible stumbling-block in the way of the weaker brethren ; that the hold of Christianity upon the English was so uncertain as to make such mention dangerous ; that he avoided everything that might contribute to a lapse into heathendom. But Northumbria had been Christian since 627, and the last great champion of the old gods, Penda, King of Mercia, had been slain in 655. Cynewulf could hardly have feared to undermine the faith of his readers. It is more likely that his excision of these names is a manifestation of that ancient and world-wide instinct which leads men to be cautious in pronouncing the names of dangerous and possibly malignant supernatural powers, the instinct which finds expression in the proverb, no longer understood, "Speak of the devil and he's sure to come," — in other words, don't speak of him at all if you can help it, or trouble may follow.

Some of the differences between Cynewulf's Juliana and the Acta as we have them are thus merely stylistic ; others represent an intentional alteration in the substance of the story. Some of the other apparent omissions, alterations and additions are very possibly to be explained as due to Cynewulf's use of a MS. of the Acta not wholly like any at present known.¹

In Cynewulf's hands, the story takes the following form :

I

"In the days of Maximian, the cruel persecutor of Christians, there dwelt in Nicomedia a rich and noble reeve, by name Eleusius,² an idolater. To him, by her father, Africanus, was betrothed a Christian maiden, Juliana. Eleusius was eager to marry her, but she answered that she would consent only if he gave up his false gods and became a Christian ; otherwise, neither threats nor torments could persuade her (1-57). Eleusius, infuriated, sent for her father, who was also a heathen, and reported her reply to him. Africanus urged Juliana to accept the reeve, and threatened, in case of her refusal, to give her to wild beasts. Finding her still unmoved, he had her scourged, and gave her over to Eleusius (58-160).

"In the morning she was brought before his tribunal, where all marvelled at her beauty. Eleusius greeted her affectionately, and promised her immunity if she would worship his gods. The maiden defied him, and again refused to marry him unless he would forsake his idols. He caused her to be stripped naked and scourged, and threatened her with worse tortures. She proclaimed again her faith in God and her contempt of the reeve's divinities. Eleusius next had her hung by the hair from a tree and scourged for six hours; she was then taken down and led to prison (160-235).

II

“The devil, in the form of an angel, entered her prison, and urged her to sacrifice to Eleusius's gods and thus escape his wrath. Questioned by her, he assured her that he was an angel of God, sent from on high with this message. Juliana prayed that she might learn who the visitant really was. A voice from heaven replied, ‘Seize the insolent one, and hold him fast until he tell his errand and his origin’ (236-286).

“Her heart was cheered. She seized the devil¹ [and made him confess that he was indeed a demon, the tempter of Adam and Eve, of Cain, and of many others, he who had induced Judas] to betray the King of Kings, the instigator of the deaths of John the Baptist, of Peter and Paul, of Christ, and of Andrew (289-315). Ordered to tell yet more, he confessed that he had been sent by his father, the chief of all devils, and told of the punishment to which he was liable for having failed in his mission. Plied with further questions by the Saint, he told her of his methods of leading the righteous astray, of his frequent discomfitures, of the sufferings which he had inflicted upon the good, and of the crimes which he had caused since the time of Creation (316-510). But no one, even of the patriarchs and prophets, had ever won over him such a signal victory as hers (511-530).

“Then the reeve again sent for her. She dragged the devil with her a little way, but upon his entreaty not to disgrace him further, let him go, to tell his fellows of his ill success (530-558).¹

III

“[As she came before the reeve, he asked her by what enchantments she had endured her tortures. She replied that God had sent His angel to aid and comfort her. She added a warning that he, the reeve, should beware of eternal torment, and repent. Eleusius then subjected her to torture by means of a wheel set with sharp swords, and also by fire, but Juliana, although torn and bleeding, was unshaken in faith. An angel descended from heaven and extinguished the flames. Juliana, free from pain, uttered a long prayer, rehearsing God’s past deliverances and mercies, and beseeching deliverance from the tyrant (Acta §§ 13-15).

“[The executioners became converted and proclaimed their belief in Juliana’s God and their readiness to suffer martyrdom. Eleusius sent the news to Maximian, who returned orders that all should be beheaded. Five hundred men and one hundred and thirty women then suffered death (§ 16).

“[The prefect ordered Juliana to be burned alive. In response to her prayer for aid]² an angel descended and scattered the fire. Juliana stood uninjured. Next she was immersed in a vessel of molten lead ; the lead spurted upon the throng and destroyed five and seventy of the heathen host ; the Saint remained unharmed. Eleusius, raging and gnashing his teeth, ordered her to be beheaded (559-614).

"The devil reappeared and cried for vengeance upon her, but fled at the glance of the Saint. At the place of execution, Juliana addressed farewell counsels to the on-lookers, and asked for their prayers. Then she met her death (614-671).

"Eleusius, putting to sea, was drowned with thirty-four companions (671-688). Juliana's body was brought back into the city by a great host, singing songs of praise ; over her grave in later years the praises of God were sung, as they are to this day (688-695)."

In his closing words, the poet speaks of his need of this saint's intercession at the Day of Judgment. The sins of his early days were too late repented. He begs each reader of his poem to pray for him by name (the name is woven into the verse), that on that awful day he may find a lenient Judge (695-731).

What are the merits of Cynewulf's poem considered as a work of literature ? The judgments hitherto expressed have been unfavourable,¹ and in truth, it cannot be regarded as a very remarkable performance. The comparatively close adherence to the original gives it a unity, a directness of movement, not to be found in the Christ, a poem which in almost every other respect is of a distinctly higher order. By suppressing certain crudities in the legend, already mentioned, Cynewulf has succeeded in making the character of his heroine more consistent and more saintly. On the other hand, the dialogue is undramatic and tedious, especially in the long scene between Juliana and the tempter ; the verse frequently lacks vigour ;¹ and the entire treatment of the story is bookish, and lacking in those touches of observation or imagination which might have redeemed it from tediousness. "Local colour" is an invention of the nineteenth century ; we cannot find fault with Cynewulf for being unable to give us a picture of oriental life and manners ; but if we compare the scene between Juliana and the demon with the encounter of Christian and Apollyon in the Pilgrim's Progress, or even with the corresponding scene in the Old French Vie Sainte Juliane, we can see the difference between a conventionalized, bookish conception of good and evil, and one which is closely associated with physical images or with the humble facts of every-day life. In Bunyan's scene, which is too familiar to call for quotation, the presentation of the struggle between right and wrong is as allegorical as in the Juliana (352-417), but Bunyan, it is evident, sees his allegory with vividness, whereas Cynewulf almost repeats his by rote. In the Vie Sainte Juliane, on the other hand, the devil repeats literally to Juliana the wicked suggestions by which he leads his victims astray, and his language is precisely that which might be used by some godless man to his churchgoing neighbour: "Those clerks chant too long prayers; when you go there, you have to stay too long. You ought to be going to your work, by which you must live the year round. It is better to earn money than to pray, for from the proceeds of your labour you can give alms and clothe the poor. You can go to church often enough when you have more leisure."² There is nothing in

Cynewulf's whole poem so lifelike and natural as this simple bit of bad counsel. Nowhere in the Juliana is there any real evidence that the author knew more of the acts and speech of men and women than what he had read in books. Little worse could be said of any poem introducing human figures.

But although the direct human interest of the Juliana is slight, the piece may yet claim consideration on other grounds. Any one can recognize its linguistic, antiquarian, and historic interest. It is one of the priceless records of our early speech; it is a relic of Christian faith in days when England was only one century removed from heathendom; with its companion pieces, the Christ and the Elene, it entitles its author to a place of honour, almost at the beginning, in the long line of poets of English speech, extending now over more than twelve centuries. Let us be grateful that "Time, which antiquates antiquities, and hath an art to make dust of all things, hath yet spared these minor monuments."

APPENDIX TO INTRODUCTION

THE LEGEND AFTER CYNEWULF

We have seen that the first work relating the martyrdom of St. Juliana was in all probability composed in Greek ; that of this lost Greek account two independent Latin translations were made, both still extant, and known as the Acta S. Julianæ ; that a summary of the Acta was inserted by Bede in his Martyrology ; and that next the Acta was paraphrased by Cynewulf in his Juliana. This is, in brief, the literary history of the legend from the fourth to the close of the eighth century.

Although works of later date are not strictly relevant to our present study, it may not be amiss, by way of postscript, to append a brief account of the fortunes of the legend during the remainder of the mediæval period.

Several martyrologists of the ninth century repeat Bede's summary with only slight verbal changes : Florus, head of the cathedral school at Lyons (d. about 860) ; Ado, Archbishop of Vienne (appointed 860)¹ ; Rabanus Maurus, Archbishop of Mayence (about 845)² ; Usuard, a monk of St. Germain-des-Prés (about 875)³ ; Notker, a monk of St. Gall (d. 912).⁴

Early in the tenth century Simeon Metaphrastes (the 'paraphraser'), a Byzantine author, included a life of Juliana in his collection of 122 lives of Saints. Simeon is said to have treated his sources in a very arbitrary fashion, and to have drawn freely upon his imagination in embellishing his narratives, but it must be admitted that his version of the Juliana legend is reasonably close to the form found in the Acta. He supplies the detail that the saint was eighteen years old at the time of her death. Simeon's source was presumably the old Greek life from which the Acta had been translated. A Latin translation of the work of Metaphrastes was published by A. Lipomanus about 1558, and reprinted in 1570 by L. Surius. Both the Greek and the Latin texts have been reprinted by Migne.¹

A second life in Latin is the Alia Vita,² written by a certain Peter, a subdeacon, about 1100, and dedicated by him to Peter, Archbishop of Naples. This writer declares that in his day the saint's life was little read, because of its crude style. He handles the legend with great freedom, and with much display of learning and rhetoric. Many of the long speeches of the original are suppressed, and the scene between Juliana and the devil is greatly abridged. In exchange, hexameter verses are inserted, the scenes between Juliana and Eleusius are expanded into a formal debate, the correspondence between Eleusius and Maximian is given in full, and an account of the translation to Cumæ is added.

In the twelfth century a priest named Arnolt, author of the poem Von der Siebenzahl zum Lobe des heiligen Geistes, versified her story in Middle High German, in an Austro-Bavarian dialect.³ His most notable departure from the Acta consists in converting the injuries inflicted by the devil upon the righteous (Acta § 11) into punishments inflicted by "Sathanat" upon his followers (ll. 456-469).

An Anglo-Norman poetical version of the legend, La vie Sainte Juliane, composed about the end of the twelfth century, has been published by H. von Feilitzen,¹ from MSS. Cant. Misc. 74 and Douce 381. This version, in which the Acta is expanded with considerable freedom, has 1300 lines. Von Feilitzen names also the MSS. in which may be found a second Old French poetical life, an Old French prose translation of the Acta, and translations made by Jean Belet and Jehan de Vignay in the fourteenth century of the Legenda Aurea, which includes an account of St. Juliana.²

A document entitled by Bolland *Translatio III. S. Julianæ*³ professes to be an account by an eyewitness of the translation of St. Maximus and St. Juliana from Cumæ to Naples after the destruction of Cumæ by the Neapolitans in 1207. St. Juliana's relics, contained in a marble sarcophagus, were borne by two cardinal priests, escorted by a procession of clergy and populace carrying candles and singing hymns, to the church of the nunnery of St. Maria de Donna Aromata. The writer makes no reference to the legend.

Of the beginning of the thirteenth century are two Middle English poetical lives, both in Southern dialect, edited for the Early English Text Society in 1872 by Cockayne and Brock, the alliterative Liflade of Seinte Juliene (from Bodl. MS. 34 and Royal MS. 17 A. xxvii), and the rhyming Seyn Julian (from Ashmole MS. 43). The former is on about the same scale as the Acta, to which, on the whole, it is very faithful. The latter has only 228 lines, and forms a part of the collection known as the South-English Legendary, a cycle of saints' lives for the entire year, of which numerous MSS. exist.¹ Von Feilitzen mentions also a short prose life in Old (presumably Middle) English, MS. Douce 377.

St. Juliana's life is found also in an Italian version of the fourteenth century,² and in Old Swedish.³

It will be sufficient, in conclusion, without attempting to pursue further the history of the legend in detail, to mention the inclusion of a short summary of the story given in the Acta, about 500 words in length, in the famous and popular collection of saints' lives known as the Legenda Aurea, composed toward the end of the thirteenth century by Jacobus de Voragine (James of Varazze), Archbishop of Genoa.⁴ In its original Latin form and in numerous translations, this work enjoyed extraordinary favor for several centuries, first in manuscript and subsequently in print. With the mention of two of these translations we may fittingly conclude this sketch: the poetical *Legends of the Saints*⁵ sometimes attributed to the Scottish poet John Barbour (d. 1395), and the Golden Legende in English prose, printed at Westminster by William Caxton in 1484,⁶ seven centuries after Cynewulf's Juliana.

The Text

FOR the readings of the MS., the editor has relied upon the collations of Schipper (Germ. xix. 332), Gollancz (Exeter Book), and Assmann (Grein-Wülker, Bibliothek der angels. Poesie iii. 117-139). All deviations from the MS. are indicated in the variants. Additions to the text and letters substituted for others are placed in brackets, but the common contractions used by the scribe are expanded without indication. The punctuation and the use of capitals are modern, and according to English (not continental) usage. The variants from other editions given by Assmann (Grein-Wülker, as above) have been collated with the editions themselves. As the text is short, variants have been given in full, without limitation to those actually involving a change of meaning or of metre, except that some of Ettmüller's arbitrary alterations of spelling have not been recorded. Differences of punctuation involving a distinctly different interpretation of the relations of words or clauses are pointed out in the notes. Further textual emendations proposed elsewhere than in editions of the entire poem are also given among the variants.

The abbreviations used in the list of variants are as follows : Cos. = Cosijn, Beitr. xxiii. 123-125 ; Edd. = all editors except those expressly mentioned as disagreeing ; Ett. = Ettmüller ; Fr. = Frucht, Metrisches, etc. ; Go. = Gollancz ; Gr. = Grein, Bibliothek, ii. ; Gr2. = Grein, Germ. x. 423 ; GrW. = Grein-Wülker, Bibliothek, iii. ; Ho. = Holthausen, IdgF. iv. 305 ; S. = Sievers, Beitr. x, xii ; Sch. = Schipper, Germ. xix. 332 ; Th. = Thorpe ; Tr. = Trautmann, Kynewulf der Bischof. For titles, see the Bibliography.

Acta S. Julianæ¹

CAPUT I*

*S. Juliana connubium gentilis præfecti aversata, ab eo et patre dire torquetur.*²

1. Benignitas Salvatoris nostri,³ martyrum perseverantia comprobata, eo usque processit, ut fidei amicos coronaret, et inimicos eorum ex ipsis inferorum claustris erueret.⁴ Denique temporibus Maximiani imperatoris, persecutoris Christianæ religionis, erat quidem senator in civitate Nicomedia, nomine Eleusius,⁵ amicus imperatoris. Hic desponsaverat quendam puellam nobili genere ortam, nomine Julianam. Cujus pater Africanus cog-

¹ As published by Bolland, Acta Sanctorum, Feb. tom. II. pp. 875-879 (Feb. 16), under the title, Acta auctore anonymo ex xi veteribus MSS. He enumerates these as (1) a MS. at München-Gladbach; (2) a MS. at Cusano (Campania); (3, 4) two MSS. at Treves (Germany), in the monasteries of St. Maximin and of St. Martin; (5) a MS. at Utrecht, in the Church of St. Saviour; (6) one at Rougeval (Brabant); (7) one at Hubergen, in the diocese of Antwerp; (8) one belonging to the Queen of Sweden; (9, 10, 11) three MSS. of his own, of which one agreed closely with (1), the second was slightly briefer, and the third briefer still. Variants from these MSS., as given by Bolland, will be designated by G, C, Max, Mar, . . . H, S, and BBB. Bolland gives no variants from (5) and (6). What he tells of the readings of the other MSS. is frequently somewhat indefinite, as will appear below. Some extracts given by Schönbach from the MSS. consulted by him (see Intr., p. xxvii), apparently representing a different translation from the (lost) Greek original, will be indicated by M (Munich).

² The chapter-headings, and the division into chapters and sections, are presumably by Bolland.

nominabatur, qui et ipse erat persecutor Christianorum; uxor vero ejus dum intentione animi sacrilegia Martis¹ perhorresceret, neque Christianis neque paganis miscebatur. Juliana autem habens animum rationabilem, prudensque consilium, et dignam conversationem, et virtutem plenissimam, hoc cogitabat apud se quoniam verus est Deus, qui fecit coelum et terram; et per singulos dies vacans orationibus concurrebat ad ecclesiam Dei, ut divinos apices² intelligeret. Eleusius vero sponsus ejus nuptiarum complere festinebat festivitatem. Illa autem dicebat ad eum: Nisi dignitatem præfecturæ administraveris, nullo modo tibi possum conjungi. Hæc audiens Eleusius, dedit munera imperatori Maximiano, et successit præfecto alio administranti, seditque in carruca,³ agens officium præfecturæ. Transactis autem paucis diebus, denuo misit ad eam. Tunc Juliana prudenti pertractans consilio dixit ad eos: Euntes dicite Eleusio: Si credideris Deo meo, et adoraveris Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, accipiam te maritum. Quod si nolueris, quære tibi aliam uxorem.

2. Audiens hæc præfectus, vocavit patrem ejus, et dixit ei omnia verba quæ ei mandaverat Juliana. Pater vero ejus hæc audiens dixit: Per misericordes et amatores⁴ hominum deos, quod si vera sunt hæc verba, tradam eam tibi. Et his dictis perrexit ad filiam suam cum magno furore et convocavit eam, dicens: Filia mea dulcissima Juliana, lux oculorum meorum, quare non vis accipere præfectum sponsum tuum? En vero volo illi complere nuptias vestras. Beata Juliana confidens in Christum dixit: Si coluerit Patrem et Filium et Spiritum

Sanctum, nubam illi; quod si noluerit, non potest me accipere in conjugium. Hæc audiens pater ejus dixit: Per misericordes deos Apollinem et Dianam, quod si permanseris in his sermonibus, feris te tradam. Juliana respondit: Noli credere, pater, quia te timere habeo. Per Filium Dei vivi, quod si viva habeo incendi, numquam tibi consentiam. Tunc denuo rogavit eam pater suus, ut ei consentiret, nec tale perderet decus. Ad hæc Juliana respondit: Eia pater,¹ non intelligis quæ a me tibi dicuntur. Verum dico et non mentior, quia omnem questionem et omnia judicia gratanter sustineo, nec recedam a Domini mei Jesu Christi præcepto. Statim pater ejus jussit eam exspoliari et cædi, dicens ad eam: Quare non adoras deos? Illa autem clamans dicebat: Non credo, non adoro, non sacrifico idolis surdis et mutis; sed adoro Dominum Jesum Christum, qui vivit semper et regnat in cœlis. Tunc pater ejus cruciatam tradidit eam præfecto sponso ejus.²

3. Præfectus autem jussit eam diluculo adduci ante tribunæ suum, et videns pulchritudinem ejus, mollissimis verbis allocutus est verbis: Dic, dulcissima mea Juliana, quomodo me tanto tempore delusisti? Quis te persuasit colere alienum Deum? Convertere ad me et declina omnes cruciatus qui tibi parati sunt si sacrificare nolueris. B. Juliana respondit: Et tu si consenseris mihi, ut adores Deum Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, acquiescam tibi; si vero nolueris, non mihi dominaberis. Præfectus dixit: Domina mea Juliana, consenti mihi, et credo³ Deo tuo. B. Juliana respondit: Accipe Spiritum Dei, et nubam tibi. Præfectus dixit: Non possum, domina mea, quia si fecero, audiet imperator, et successorem mihi dans, caput meum gladio amputabit. S. Juliana respondit: Et si tu times istum imperatorem mortalem et in stercore sedentem,¹ quomodo me cogerem potes immortalem imperatorem negare, unde multum blandiens decipere me non potes? Quæ tibi videntur, in me exerce tormenta. Ego autem credo in quem credidit Abraham, Isaac et Jacob, et non sunt confusi, quia potens est me liberare de tormentis tuis.

4. Audiens hæc præfectus, commotus iracundia jussit eam cædi. Extensa vero in terra S. Juliana, jussit eam quatuor virgis nudam cædi, ita ut mutarentur in ea tres² milites vicissim cædentes; et post hæc jussit cessari ab ea, et dixit ei Præfectus: Ecce principium quæstionis: accede, et sacrifica magnæ Dianæ, et liberaberis de tormentis. Quod si nolueris, per magnum deum Apollinem, non tibi parcam. S. Juliana respondit: Noli credere, quod suasionibus tuis me revocare poteris a Domino meo Jesu Christo. Tunc præfectus jussit eam capillis suspendi. Appensa vero per sex³ horas clamans dicebat: Christe fili Dei, veni, adjuva me. Tunc præfectus jussit eam deponi, dicens ad eam: Accede, Juliana, et sacrifica, ne in tormentis deficias; non enim te poterit liberare, quem putas Deum colere.⁴ Juliana respondit: Vincere me non poteris miser per tua tormenta; sed ego in nomine Domini mei Jesu Christi vincam mentem tuam inhumanam, et faciam erubescere patrem tuam Satanam, et inveniam fiduciam in conspectu Domini mei Jesu Christi. Præfectus autem commotus ira jussit æramenta conflari,⁵ et spoliatam eam a capite, usque ad talos perfundi, et sic eam incendi. Quo facto, nihil ei nocuit. Iterum jussit ligamen¹ per femora ejus mitti, et sic eam in carcerem recipi.

5. Hoc autem facto posita S. Juliana in carcerem cœpit dicere: Domine Deus omnipotens, anima mea in exitu posita est; confirma me, et exaudi me, et miserere mei, et dolentibus circumstantibus mihi miserere; et præsta mihi misericordiam tuam, sicut et omnibus qui tibi placuerunt.² Deprecor etiam te, Domine, ne deseras me, quia pater meus et mater mea dereliquerunt me; sed tu Domine Deus meus suscipe me; et ne projicias me a facie tua, et ne deseras me in isto tempore doloris, sed serva me in his tormentis, sicut servasti Danielelem in lacu leonum, et sicut liberasti Ananiam, Azariam, Misaelem de camino ignis ardentis, sic et me custodi in brevitæ vitæ istius, et deduc me in portum voluntatis tuæ, sicut deduxisti filios Israel fugientes ex Ægypto per mare sicut per terram, inimicos autem illorum operuit mare; ita me Domine exaudire dignare, et extingue minas tyranni, qui contra me exsurrexit, et destrue potestatem ejus ac mentem, quoniam tu Domine scis naturam humanam, quia captivitatem non potest pati. Esto mihi Deus præsens auxiliator et adjutor in tormentis, quæ inducturus est super me ille qui judicii tui præceptum non servat;³ et fac ipsum præfectum, participem dæmoniorum, a me derideri, et ipsum consumptum a vermibus magno dolore torqueri, ut ostendatur virtus tua super me ancillam tuam, quia tu es Deus solus, et tibi gloriam dicimus in secula seculorum, Amen.

CAPUT II

6. Et dum finisset orationem apparuit ei dæmon, nomine Belial, in figura angeli, et dixit ad eam: Juliana dilecta mea, mala et pessima tormenta tibi parat præfectus. Modo audi me, et salva eris. Cum te de carcere jusserit egredi, accede et sacrifica, et effugies tormenta. Putabat autem S. Juliana quod angelus Dei esset, et dicit illi: Tu quis es? Dicit ad eam diabolus: Angelus Domini sum. Misit me ad te, ut sacrifices, et non moriaris. Juliana autem ingemiscens amarissime exclamavit ad Dominum, et oculos suos levans ad coelum cum lacrymis dixit: Domine Deus coeli et terrae, ne deseras me, neque permittas perire ancillam tuam, sed confirma cor meum in virtute tua, et confidenti in nomine tuo significa mihi quis est iste qui mihi talia loquitur et persuadet idola adorare. Statimque vox facta est de coelo ad eam, dicens: Confide Juliana, ego sum tecum qui loquor ad te. Tu autem apprehende istum qui tecum loquitur, ut scias quis sit ille.

7. Tunc S. Juliana exsurgens de pavimento,¹ facto Christi signaculo, tenuit Belial dæmonem et dixit ei: Dic mihi, quis es tu et unde es, vel quis te misit ad me. Tunc dæmon respondit: Dimitte me et dicam tibi. B. Juliana dixit: Dic primo et sic te dimittam. Tunc dæmon cœpit loqui: Ego sum Belial dæmon (quem aliqui Jopher nigrum² vocant) malitiis hominum oblectatus, homicidiis gaudens, amator luxuriæ, amplectens pugnam, dissolvens pacem. Ego sum qui feci Adam et Evam in

Quando enim quæsi ab illo fuimus et non inventi, mandat aliis dæmonibus ut ubi inventus fuerit is qui missus est, male tractetur ab illis; deinde fugit, ut non possit inveniri. lorum comes, martyrum consors, particeps patriarchorum, socia angelorum, adjuro te per passionem Domini Jesu Christi miserere infelicitati meæ.¹

11. S. Juliana dixit : Confitere mihi, immunde spiritus, cui hominum injuriam² fecisti? Dæmon respondit: Ego multorum hominum oculos extinxi, aliorum pedes confregi, alios in ignem misi, alios appendi, alios autem sanguinem vomere feci, alios in pontum submersi, alios vitam finire feci violenter, alios autem in suo furore manibus suis cruciari feci, et ut breviter dicam: Omnia mala, quæ in isto mundo sunt, meo consilio peraguntur, et ego ipse perficio; ³ et alios quos inveni non habentes signaculum Christi, interfeci. Et cum omnia mala fecerim, nemo ausus fuit me torquere, quantum tu. Nemo apostolorum manum meam tenuit; tu autem et ligasti me. Nemo martyrum me cecidit; nemo mihi prophetarum injurias fecit quas a te sustineo; nemo patriarcharum in me manum misit. Nam et ipsius Filii Dei experimentum cepi in deserto, et feci illum ascendere in montem excelsum, et nihil mihi fecit; et tu me sic tormentis consumis? O virginitas, quid contra nos armaris? O Joannes, quid contra nos virginitatem tuam ostendisti?

Dæmon autem rogabat eam dicens : Domina mea Juliana, dimitte me ; jam amplius noli hominibus me ridiculum facere ; non enim potero postea homines convincere.¹ Patrem meum superasti, me vinxisti, quid adhuc vis ?² Dicunt increduli Christianos misericordes esse, tu autem in me ferox visa es. Et dum hæc diceret dæmon, S. Juliana trahebat eum per forum ; et dum diu rogaret eam, projecit eum in locum stercore plenum.³

13. Et veniens intra prætorium, facies ejus gloriosa visa est omnibus. Et cum respexisset ad eam præfectus, admiratus eam, dixit: Dic mihi Juliana, quis te docuit talia ? Quomodo tanta et talia tormenta incantationibus superasti ?⁴ S. Juliana respondit: Audi me, impiissime præfecte, et dicam tibi. Dominus meus Jesus Christus docuit me colere Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, et ipse vicit patrem tuum Satanam et dæmones ejus, et misit de sedibus suis sanctis angelum suum qui mihi auxiliaretur et confortaret me.⁵ Tu autem miser ignoras quia tibi parantur æterna tormenta, ubi habebis æternos cruciatus, vermem edentem, nec deficientem, atque ob-

14. Tunc præfectus jussit adduci rotam ferream et figi in ea gladios acutos,² et super ipsam rotam imponi virginem, ut staret rota in medio duarum columnarum, et quatuor milites de ista parte, et alios quatuor ex alia parte, et milites trahebant rotam,³ et Julianam habebant superpositam. Trahentes autem milites machinam tangebant, et nobile corpus virginis Christi omnibus membris findebatur, et medullæ de ossibus ejus exhibant, et tota rota tingebatur de illa, et sæviebat ignis⁴ ex incendio. Beata autem Juliana stabat immobilis in fide Christi, contrita corpore sed rigida fide. Angelus autem Domini descendit de coelo et extinxit flammam, et vincula soluta sunt ab igne.⁵

Tu autem, impie præfecte, infer nobis supplicia; simus in poena, qui nunc usque coluimus idola; incende ignem, excogita opera patris tui.¹ Nos enim eligimus amodo habere Dominum Jesum Christum patrem, quia multo tempore afflicti sumus a patre tuo diabolo. Præfectus autem ira repletus renuntiavit omnia Maximiano imperatori. Imperator vero Maximianus dedit adversus eos sententiam, ut omnibus capita truncaretur. Ipse vero jussit omnes simul gladio feriri. Decollati autem sunt viri cum mulieribus centum triginta.²

17. Præfectus vero jussit S. Ipsa autem illa olla resiliit,¹ et incendit de adstantibus hominibus numero septuaginta quinque.² Et cum hæc vidisset præfectus, iratus scidit vestimenta suo et cum gemitu vituperavit deos, quia non potuerunt illam lædere, et quia cum ipsis quoque injuriam fecisset, nullatenus eam lædere potuerunt. Et statim dictavit adversus eam sententiam, ut gladio puniretur.

19. Audiens autem hæc S. Juliana gaudio magno repleta est, eo quod appropinquasset finis certaminis ejus. Cumque ad locum traheretur ubi decollanda erat, dæmon, qui cruciatus fuerat ab illa, subito currens venit ad præsidem³ et dicit ei: Noli ei parcere; deos vituperavit et hominibus injuriam fecit; multa etiam mala ego ab ea perpeusus sum; ⁴ reddite ergo ei quod meretur. Bonum est vigilare ad Deum, bonum est frequenter psallere, bonum est orare sine cessatione, quia nescitis quando vitam istam finiatis. Notes

1. The division into three parts, corresponding to the three chapters in the Acta as published by Bolland, has no MS. authority, but is due to Grein. Thorpe, Ettmüller, and Gollancz divide the poem into seven parts, beginning with lines 1, 105, 225, 345, 454, 559, and 607. Although this latter division is indicated in the MS., it has not much else to commend it, and can hardly have been intended by the author.

4. ārlēas cyning. The secondary stress on -lēas compensates metrically for the shortness of the second arsis. Cf. 388b, 531a, 628a, 661a, 692a.

19. rondburgum. As rond = scyld, the compound is equivalent to scildburg (Mal. 242, Jud. 305), 'phalanx, testudo.'

23. wēoh. The original stem-vowel is ī, as shown by Gothic weihs. The eo, due to loss of h and contraction in the oblique cases (Sievers³, 114. 3), has been substituted also in the uncontracted cases.

25. Heliseus. See variants to the Acta § 1. Helisæus is the Latin form of the name of the prophet Elisha. In the poem this word alliterates with words beginning with a vowel; the h is not pronounced. The same is true of Herode, 293.

27b. = Bēow. 232b. Fyrwet, in the present passage, Cosijn would translate impatience, with reference to l. 40.

28. Iulianan. This word alliterates, throughout the poem, with words in g, before either a palatal or a guttural vowel or even another consonant, showing that g was regularly pronounced as a spirant.

34. from hogde. From bears the stress, and is hence an adverb, not a prefix.

36. māppumgesteald. Literally, 'possession of treasure,' for 'treasure'; similarly æhtgestealdum, 115.

47. swencan. Previous editions have a comma after this word, and a colon after Hl̥eo.

49. gearo. Used with the genitive in B̥eoƿ. 2118.

57. onwende. on- from ond-; see the article ond- in the glossary.

73. gerāhte. Sievers³, 407, n. 11.

86. māra. When used with a noun in the vocative, the adjective commonly takes the weak form.

88. swā tō life l̥æt. Swā may be considered here as an adverb, 'likewise,' or as a conjunction, 'or.' No hard and fast line can be drawn between the two uses. Compare El. 605b-607a:

þē synt tū gearu,
swā līf swā deað, swā þē l̥eofre bið tō gecēosanne.

90. ƿreþƿeorg. The MS. is plainly at fault, but no satisfactory emendation has been proposed. Cosijn points out that ƿweorh does not occur as the second member of compounds. Holthausen reads ƿweorg.

91. glædmōd. Glæd is used in B̥eoƿ. as an epithet of princes, 'illustrious.'

104. ēadlufan. Cosijn would translate this by 'riches' (das liebe Geld), as more in keeping with the father's real motives. (Cf. eardlufan, B̥eoƿ. 692, lit. 'love of one's abode,' for 'beloved abode.') There is no corresponding passage in the Latin to decide; but ēadlufan seems to be used as a synonym of fr̥ige.

116. ænge. Proposed by Holthausen.

126. þingrædenne. Cosijn establishes the meaning of this word in this passage by comparing Bede's Hist. (ed. Miller) 170. 23, where þingung and b̥en are used as a synonymous pair.

133. bī mē lifgendre. 'As long as I live.' Cosijn cites the same idiom in Schmid, Gesetze, be lifgendre ƿære, Æthered 6. 5 § 1. So also Gu. 1207, bī mē lifgendum.

190. ealdordōm. Apparently a mistranslation of the Latin, Ecce principium quæstionis, due to an association of principium with princeps, 'ruler.' The real force of the original is, 'This is only the beginning of the ordeal.'

201. lēodgewin. The compound here means no more than the simple gewin.

202. dolwillen. Explained by Cosijn as the substantive use of the neuter of an adjective similar to druncenwillen, 'ebriosus,' Cur. Past. 401. 29. Cf. druncen, 'drunkenness,' Father 34.

204. wrecan. Sievers (Beitr. x. 514) suggests wræcan from wræc, 'punishment,' citing Dan. 577.

205. þe. Professor Hart would read þē, 'because,' an instrumental form similar to þȳ. The passages supporting this view are Blickl. H. 183. 34, Orosius 120. 28 and 132. 14, and especially Alcuin De Virtutibus (Angl. xi. 386, line 363), where þē translates quia.

216. gēasne. S. 76, n. 1. The ēa is an exceptional palatalization of an æ arising from i-umlaut of ā.

219. hē. This reading, suggested by Professor Hart, is supported by line 397. The same change could be made in line 42, but is there less necessary.

229. slege þrōwade. This third scourging (cf. 142, 188) is not found in the Acta, in which the corresponding passage reads, Tunc præfectus iussit eam capillis suspendi. Appensa vero per sex horas clamans dicebat, Christe fili Dei, veni, adjuva me. Tunc præfectus iussit eam deponi, etc.

233b-234. Cf. Andr. 57b-58, him wæs Crīstes lof on fyrhðlo-can fæste bewunden.

236-237. Compare Andreas 1074b-1077a :

Him sēo wēn gelāh,
syððan mid corðre carcernes duru
eorre æsčerend opene fundon, onhlidan hamera geweorc.

242a. Holthausen transposes : gesīð singāl.

242b-243. Cf. Andr. 1462b-1463, þū cōm Dryhten God in þæt hlinræced, hæleða Wuldor.

244. hæfde engles hīw. Cf. ii Cor. xi. 14, 'Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.'

245b-246a. Cf. Andr. 1341-1342, Ongan eft swā ær ealdgeniðla, helle hæftling, hearmleoð galan.

253. swā. The meaning is practically 'when' ; the Latin has cum.

259b. The same idiom in Bæow. 257, hwanan ðowre cyme syndon.

264. wælgrim. Inflected like the simple adjective; not as a polysyllable. Compare heardlicu, 263.

280. sie. The change (proposed by Holthausen) is necessary for the metre. This is the only certain occurrence of sie as a dissyllable in the poem.

288. The length of the missing passage was probably 65–75 lines. Its general nature may be determined by consulting the Acta, § 7; see Intr., p. xxxvi.

289a. = Chr. 1681a. The ealra of the latter passage has commonly been considered a part of the preceding line; the transfer was proposed by Sievers and carried out by Cook in his text.

292. Cf. Chr. 1112–1113b, pær blōd ond wæter bûtū ætsomne ūt bicwōman.

293. Herode. See note to 25, and Mat. xiv. 3–10.

298. Simon. Simon Magus, mentioned in Acts viii. 9–24. The story of his conflicts at Rome with the apostles Peter and Paul, and of the martyrdom of the apostles by order of Nero, forms the subject of apocryphal Acts, of which several versions are still extant in both Greek and Latin; see Lipsius, Die apokryphen Apostelgeschichten II. 1–390, Braunschweig, 1887, and for texts, Lipsius, Acta Petri, etc., Leipzig, 1891, and Fabricius, *Codex Apocryphus Novi Testamenti*², Hamburg, 1719. The story is told in OE. in the fifteenth Blickling Homily (ed. Morris, pp. 170–193), in Aelfric's Homilies (ed. Thorpe, I. 370–385), and in Wulfstan's Homilies (ed. Napier, pp. 98–100). The source of these OE. accounts is the Acta Petri et Pauli ascribed to Marcellus, published in Lipsius, pp. 119–177.

304b–306. Nothing in the Latin corresponds to this passage; it is also out of chronological order. It was probably inserted in order to provide in Pilatus a word to alliterate with Petrus and Paulus.

307. Egias. This name does not appear in the Acta S. Julianæ, which have, “ego sum qui Andream feci tradi in regione Patras.” Of apocryphal Acts of Andrew there are also several versions; see Lipsius, Apostelgeschichten I. 543–622; and for texts Tischendorff, Acta Apostolorum Apocrypha, Leipzig, 1851, pp.

105-131, Fabricius, op. cit., pp. 456-515, and Migne, Patrol. Lat. 71, coll. 1011-1102. The story of Andrew's trial before the proconsul Aegeas at Patræ in Achaia, and of his martyrdom there, is told in OE. by Aelfric (Hom. ed. Thorpe, i. 586-598). The story of Andrew's adventures among the cannibals of "Mermedonia" (poem Andreas and nineteenth Blickl. Homily) is derived from another work, the apocryphal Acts of Andrew and Mattherw (Greek text in Tischendorf, pp. 132-166).

307-311b. Cf. Fates of the Apostles, 16-22 :

Swylce Andreas in Achagia
for Egias aldre genēðde ;
ne prēodode hē fore prymme ðēodcyniges æniges on eorðan, ac him ēce gecēas langsumre lif, lēoht unhwilen, syððan hildeheard heriges byrhtme æfter gūðplegan gealgan pehte.

310. Cf. Andr. 1327, þæt hē on gealgan his gāst onsende ; El. 480, on galgan his gāst onsende.

313b. Cf. 494b, Ic āsecgan ne mæg. A common formula ; cf. Chr. 1176b, þæt āsecgan ne magun ; Chr. 219-221a, nis ænig nū eorl under lyfte, secg searoponcol, tō þæs swiðe glēaw þe þæt āsecgan mæge, etc.

321. fæder. According to the Latin, Beelzebub. The demon's own name is Belial.

344. þrāgmælum. One would expect a synonym of nȳde ; the half-line is probably corrupt.

352-353. ēaðe . . . gecȳðan. This reading is supported by El. 588b-90, hē þē mæg sōð gecȳðan, onwreōn wȳrda gerȳno . . . oð ende forð.

359. ānes cræfte. The same idiom in Chr. 567b, ānes meahum.

368. Previous editions have a comma after gedwilda and a semicolon at the end of the line.

378. ond. Translate by 'if.' For this use of OE. ond, see J. M. Hart in Mod. Lang. Notes xvii, p. 231. Although later commonly distinguished by being written an, this is the same word as the ordinary and ; the conditional idea lies in the optative which follows.

Previous editions have a comma after gelēafan and a colon after fremman (380).

382-413. The metaphorical character of this passage is due to Cynewulf; the Latin original is literal and matter-of-fact. There is apparently an echo of Ephes. vi. 10-19.

402. bið se torr þýrel. A condition expressed by inversion, without gif. See Mätzner, Engl. Gram. II. 485, and Mather, Conditional Sent. in OE., p. 26.

408. tō fremman. The uninflected infinitive is found accompanied by tō in 557 and (as amended by Sievers) 569. Other passages in which this construction occurs are Chr. 1555; Dan. 76; Az. 37; Phoen. 275; Seaf. 37; Bēow. 316, 2556; Gu. 502 (list taken from Cook's note to Chr. 1555).

410. mǣnþēawum. For this emendation, cf. El. 929, ond mǣnþēawum mīnum folgaþ. The expression occurs in similar connection: a devil is speaking of an apostate (Julian).

471. oroð. Suggested by Hart, Mod. Lang. Notes xvii, p. 232. Sol. 221a has ðurh āttres oroð.

474-475. him lāsta wearð sīpast gesýne. Cosijn cites Bēow. 1403 and 2947 for gesýne serving as predicate.

481b-483a. This passage is not in the same place as its Latin original, alios appendi, which follows alios in ignem misi (= 473-475).

482. hyra drēorge. Grein's heorudrēorge, the adjective from heorudrēor, '(sword-)blood,' is accepted by Holthausen. It occurs, Bēo. 935, 1780, 2720; Andr. 998-1083; El. 1214. But Cosijn cites Heliand 4155, drōrag sterban, and the half-line as it stands is no weaker metrically than many others in the poem; e.g., 358b.

485. ealde æfponcan. As corrected, this half-line = Judith 265a.

491. Godes tǣcne. In the Latin, signaculum Christi, that is, the sign of the cross.

492. þā. It is not possible to make good sense out of the reading of the MS.

496. ær ond sīp. This formula, literally 'before and after,' is commonly to be translated 'early and late.' Cf. 548, 710.

510. næs. The half-line has been brought into agreement with 518b. Cf. also 513.

511 and 519. þe. This reading is not an alteration, but a different interpretation, of the MS., which has a crossed p.

515. wītgena. Previous editions have a comma after this word and a colon after unmæte (517).

531a. Cf. note to 4a.

536. hæþenne. Logical gender, not in accord with dēofol.

549. wif. This change is imperative. Ænig requires a neuter noun; gelic is not used with wið; a preposition wið would be unstressed and consequently would not alliterate.

557. tō secgan. See note to 408.

558. The lost passage represented the Acta §§ 13, 14, 15 and part of 16. The scale of the poem varies too greatly from one passage to another to enable us to judge whether only one leaf has been lost, or more. See Intr., p. xxxvii.

563-564. cwōm blīcan. A common idiom in OE. poetry: a verb of motion followed by a complementary infinitive; thus, Gen. 2849, Gewīt þū ofestlice, Abraham, fēran; Bēow. 1644, Dā cōm in gān ealdor þegna; Brun. 53-55, Gewiton him þā Norðmenn . . . Dyflin sēcan; etc.

569. Cf. Andr. 1659, þæt wæs þām weorode weorc to gepoligenne (MS. weor, Kluge weorc, Wülker, weorce); Bēow. 1417b-1419, Denum eallum wæs, winum Scyldinga, weorce on mōde tō gepolianne, ðegne monegum. The change from polianne to polian is necessary for metrical reasons (Sievers, Beitr. x. 482).
For tō with the infinitive, see note to 408.

570. = El. 978 (hīe . . . meahton). þær is to be translated by 'if,' i.e., 'if only!', 'would that!'. For þær in this sense, cf. Chr. 1312, Soul 142; for þær introducing conditional clauses, cf. Bēow. 797, 1835; Gen. 388; Chr. 753, 1106; El. 838, and for examples in prose, Mather, Conditional Sent. in OE. p. 40, n. 2.

576. wīges wōmum. Cf. El. 18b-19a, Him wæs hild boden, wīges wōma. Wōma was probably used of some kind of in-cantation; Ōmi (Gylfaginning 3, Grimnesmal 49) was one of the names of Woden, the great master of magic. Without the authority of his original, Cynewulf seems to declare that after the cauldron has been made, the prefect has charms sung about it, of a sort used against an enemy.

576-577. wudubēamum, holte. Bēam ordinarily means 'tree,' and holt, 'grove'; the common word for 'wood,' the material, is trēow.

589-594. Cf. Andr. 1469-77 :

‘*Arās pā mægene rōf, sægde Meotude panc, hāl of hæfte heardra wita;
næs him gewemmed wlite nē wlōh of hrægle lungre ālȳsed nē loc of hēafde, nē bān gebrocen, nē blōdig wund lice lenge, nē lāðes dæl pūrh dolgslege drēore bestēmed, ac wæs eft swā Ær pūrh þa æðelan miht lof lādende ond on his līce trum.*’

Dan. 437-440 :

næs hyra wlite gewemmed nē nænig wrōht on hrægle, nē feax fȳre beswæled, ac hīe on friðe Dryhtnes of ðām grimman gryre glade treddeðon, glēawmōde guman on gāstes hyld.

605. hine. Ďeon ordinarily takes the dative. Klaeber corrects to him.

610. inwitrūne. The OE. inwit, 'hate,' has no connection with the ME. inwit, 'conscience.' It seems to be a borrowing, hard to account for, of the Latin invidia.

621. þæt. Professor Hart would prefer to interpret the crossed þ as standing for þær.

635. londmearce nēah. The Latin has simply, Et cum ducta fuisset ad locum ubi decollanda erat. The English version seems to record the trace of some old custom. In the OFr. Vie Sainte Juliane and in the ME. Seyn Julian she is led without the town to die: "Ge vos commant ke l'en menez De fors la ville en cez preiz" (1199-1200); "And smyt of hire heved wiþþoute þe toun" (186).

636. ond. Hart, Mod. Lang. Notes xvii, p. 231, suggests that ond is here equivalent to usque ('even').

647-654. The author of the Acta, whom Cynewulf here follows, is echoing the language of Luke vi. 47-49.

649. gefæstnige. This pres. opt. pl. in -e is in accordance with the Northumbrian dialect in which the poem was originally written, but as the case is isolated, it may be due only to an accidental omission of final n by the copyist.

658. frofre. Holthausen declares this restoration metrically impossible, and suggests friðes or gefēan.

678-679. xxx wæs ond feowere. See the variants to the Acta § 22. The number 34 is also given by the ME. Liflade (both versions, pp. 78, 79), the ME. Seyn Julian (l. 221), and the MHG. Juliana (l. 621).

692a. Cf. note to 4a.

688-695. Ungelice wæs, etc. Instead of following the Acta, which relate that Juliana's body was taken to Pozzuoli by Sophia, or Sephonia, Cynewulf implies that Juliana was buried at Nicomedia, which remained her burial-place to his own day, — a most curious departure from his authority.

691. burgum. Plural in the sense of the singular. Cf. on burgum (Ps. liv. 8), translating in civitate; the King James version has, "in the city" (numbered lv. 9). Similarly, Guthlac's body is said to rest, burgum on innan (Gu. 1341), and the same phrase is used parallel with in Ierusalem, El. 1056.

697-712b. Printed, with modern version, by Kemble in his article On Anglo-Saxon Runes, in Archæologia xxviii. 363 (1840), in connection with his discovery of the name of Cynewulf in the runes of Christ, the Elene and Juliana. Kemble wrote, "Not content with having once already given us this acrostic of his name, the poet repeats it at a later period in the Exeter book, and in a manner which renders it very difficult to translate the lines, so great is their obscurity. [After giving the passage, with a modern English version:] It is evident here that the poet literally means to use the letters that make up his name, and that he does not introduce them as words, which he had done in the passages previously quoted." Kemble's excerpt and translation and the substance of his remarks were repeated by Thomas Wright, Biographia Britannica Literaria: Anglo-Saxon Period, pp. 504-5 (1842).

701. uncȳðgu. This emendation, suggested by Professor Hart, restores the sense. It is supported by El. 724a, elnes uncȳðig.

704-708. . h . . A . ond . † ., etc. Kemble's comment on these runes has been quoted (note to 697-712b). Grein went a little further: "These runes have here the value of mere letters of the alphabet, but in such a manner that each of the three groups (C Y and N; E W and U; L F) figures by itself as a substitute for the name in full." It was left to Trautmann (Anglia xvi. 219 ff.; Kynewulf 45-47) to formulate the principles in accordance with which runes are used in OE. poetic ciphers, and to furnish for the present passage an interpretation based on these principles (Kynewulf 47-50). The practice with regard to runes, as determined from cases where there can be no doubt of the interpretation, is as follows: (1) A rune may be used singly as the equivalent of its name (as M for mon, Ruin 24), or of a word beginning with the same sound (as W for weard, El. 1090); runes may be used in groups to signify the words which they spell (as S R O H for hors, Rid. xx. 1-2), or the words which they spell in part (as W I for wicg, Rid. lxx. 1). (2) Runes stand always for nouns. (3) The case is always nominative or accusative. (4) Groups of three or more runes always stand for the words which they spell. (5) Words represented by single runes must meet the metrical requirements of their half-line. Trautmann then interprets C Y N as cyn, '[man]kind'; E W U as ēwu, North. for WS. ēorwan, 'the sheep'; L F as licfæt, 'the body' (Gu. 1063, 1343). His solution is corroborated by the plural number of ācle and bīdað, contrasting with the singular of hwēorfað and beofað; jah, which must be changed to agree with ēwu, is equally inconsistent with ācle and bīdað, so that it affords no evidence against the solution.

707 = Chr. 803 (in the runic passage).

709b-710a. These two half-lines are transposed in the extract printed by Kemble and Wright.

731. Amen. So at the end of El., of Chr. part 1, of Seafarer, of Men's Moods, and of three Prayers.

Glossary

[The order of words is strictly alphabetical, æ coming between ad and af, but initial ð following t. Both ð and þ are represented by ð. Roman numerals indicate the class of ablaut verbs; wī., etc., that of the weak verbs; rd., the reduplicating; prp., the preteritive present verbs; anv., the anomalous verbs. When the designations of mood and tense are omitted, 'ind. pres.' is to be understood, unless some other designation has just preceded; when of mood only, supply 'ind.' if no other has preceded, otherwise the latter.]
